Hormone deficiency in the human body has been discovered to be a major contributor in accelerating the aging process. Men and women experiencing this phenomenon are plagued with multiple health problems which threaten their physical and mental wellbeing. By replacing the relevant deficient hormones with bio-identical hormones (which are exact copies of physiological hormones), further deterioration of health can be avoided and the quality of life in these individuals can be restored. Now with the availability of custom compounded bio-identical hormones for replacement therapy, the prospect of aging gracefully is no longer a mere illusion. Read more..
